FICKLE Fashion is growing tired of wool, and now that everybody has a woolen suit for very best, decrees perversely that silk shall be restored to favor. We like wool because it is warm and economical, and suggests common-sense shoes and other hygienic saws. It is so comfortable in itself that Louis Quinze heels do not harmonize with it, and so with the entry of these French absurdities comes a downward fashion.

shining silks. These have appeared in the most delicious hues, as if determined to coax themselves into immediate favor. Gros-grain usurps by far the most space, and really looks the richer for its past seclusion. The Rhadamenes are also there, and claim the privilege of introducing some dainty new tints.

Don't hurry in your looking. The salesmen like to show stylish goods as well as you like to see them. For instance, don't select that rich shade of golden brown until you have seen the mastic and soft fawn tints. Then wait for the gendarme, electric and elephant's-breath—which is more pleasing than its ugly but esthetic title. It is satisfying to know, too, that each piece of silk is as good as beautiful. By a little close attention you will see that the Gros-grains have a silky finish, tenacity and softness that indifferent qualities never assume. The Rhadames are also lustrous, heavy and, best of all, pure silk.

Then comes the trimmings; they must be put last, as both can't be first. For ultra style make a combination of silk and that piece of genuine old-fashioned Irish Poplin, whose antique grandness is quite hidden beneath a rich Oriental velvet stripe.

But the quantity of new ideas in the many-hued, brocaded, striped and plain velvets for garnitures is bewildering. You must come and see for yourself. In any case it is the most satisfactory way.

Try and save a little time for the Black Silks, French—that sounds well and means more. And these silks are guaranteed—yes, guaranteed that they will not cut or crack, and if, with fair usage they do, we'll give you another Silk. Prices, $1 25, $1 50, $2. And the Rhadames, at $1 25; their very blackness makes them white. The salesmen will tell you quite a tale in regard to them.

Mrs. J. B. Finch, wife of the great temperance lecturer, acknowledged the receipt of a box of oranges sent to her at Evansville, Ind., by George D. Kellogg, of New Canaan, Conn., of December 18, 1885. "We all pronounce them the most delicious California fruit that we ever tasted," she writes.

Perry & Co., of Denver, Col., acknowledged receipt of a sample box of oranges from the Co-operative Fruit Company at Newville, N. Y., of December 18, 1885, as follows: "Sample box of oranges received yesterday, and we wired you a night or two ago for more. A complete surprise, and we are in ecstasies over them. Why didn't we know they were so good? Please send more. We are eating California oranges, and smiled at the idea of fruit from there that was of any account. The fruit is just what we needed. The sample is beautiful, and we can sell them for anything a person wants. We will send you more soon. We will send a few days after receipt of the telegram."

Mankind naturally follows the orange. The fruit is so good, and so free from bribes of early Europe made raids on the southern neighbors in the hope of possessing themselves of their sunny clime and its orange groves.

men to think, a scholar or more lovingly cared for, a more beautiful specimen of man than a good wife, possibly better than Cinderella. Indeed, if the size of the foot was the criterion, a man could easily get a million for him any day in the kingdom of China. I have always thought the Prince charming was a very foolish and imprudent and foolish fellow. Our wives must have something more than small feet. The orchardist who grows small fruited orchards must look to something more than oranges and lemons.

There are many varieties of oranges. There is a certain charm associated with the orange grove that don't belong to the apple orchard. The orange grove is a more intimate, a country out of poetical effects. After all, the struggle for existence implies a tussle between those taking root and those in dollars and cents.

As I understand this movement, however, it is not a movement for the improvement valley as the home of the orange especially, but to convince the world that the orange is a more useful and more profitable growing successfully and profitably, and that home-seekers who come to our coast date their birth not from citrus fruits may be interested not get to the Orange River unless they choose to do so.

At this exposition has, and will exhibit, full development of the quality

Our generous rivals, the people of Oroville, was the next speaker. He said he had been impatient to address those present upon the subject of the oranges, but he had been so busy that he had prepared no written speech; all he knew upon the subject was what he had learned from the people of the city, and that was, that he could give in a few words, and that he would do so. He then proceeded to inform us that the oranges of our fair city were the best in the world, and that we were proud of our exhibit, which we think cannot be equalled elsewhere. He then informed us that the county was at Bidwell's Bar, eight miles above the town of Oroville, on the river, and that the oranges were first procured in 1859, by Robert T. Van Hook, for Judge Lewis. Another person, he said, had been sent to California to purchase the oranges, and that the oranges were first procured by Mr. Morrell. One was from Arcadia, the other a Burgum from Italy. The seeds were planted in this city, and the trees were first planted in the city of Arcapuelo orange. It is now 31 years of age, and has been bearing 10 years. It is now in the hands of Mr. Morrell, from Sacramento to Bidwell's Bar, being conveyed thither in a tub of earth, and

WASHINGTON, January 12th.—At a meeting of the Commerce Committee, to-day, the Hon. Mr. McHenry presided. The Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Fog Signal and Light-houses.

Strained His Side.

No. 11 West 126th Street.

NEW YORK, March 5, 1885.

My dear Sir:—I am sorry to hear that you are pre-arranged baggage-master at the new Central Depot. Three months ago I would have been glad to have my side strained. I immediately procured an application for a box of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I used it as directed, and in a few days my side was completely cured. Every hour felt twice as well as the day before.

My wife's complaint was well in a week.

Yours truly,

JAMES B. KENNEDY.

What a mystery to many people how a young man, who is a member of a French society, can sit down to a Thanksgiving dinner and eat a large part of a 40-pound turbot, and then get up and say, on the day after, "I am a Frenchman!"
